THE DOCTORS AND THE YELLOW FEVER.

We publish in another column a communication from a prominent physician, in which he takes exceptions to the remarks of one of our city fathers, made at a meeting last Saturday night. We think he is unnecessarily severe, and makes no allowance for the circumstances under which the remark was made. Two or three physicians were present at the time the remark was made, and we do not think they took it for a sweeping reflection on the medical fraternity, such as our correspondent seems to regard it. Men not in the habit of public speaking are not likely to weigh their words always as carefully as a man does who sits down and deliberately writes his views.

But after all there is some truth in what Dr. Harris said. The doctors have not been "driven to the wall," perhaps, but we all know, or think we know, that the theories of many of them in regard to yellow fever have been badly shaken if not entirely upset. And again we know that eminent physicians disagree in a great many respects as to its contagious effects. Some say it is transportable one way and some another, and so on. It is not our purpose to find fault with the medical fraternity, or to complain of their want of knowledge upon any point. The profession deserves the gratitude of a world for the progress made in alleviating human suffering and saving human life. No field of service has been more assiduously explored nor with more wonderful and gratifying results.

But we do believe, in view of the great yellow fever problem, that better facilities should be afforded the medical profession, for investigation and for giving relief. The act of Congress establishing a National Board of Health is good as far as it goes, but future experience may prove, if it has not already proven, that the National Board of Health must be clothed with greater powers. The time may come when all will recognize the necessity of giving the Board arbitrary powers equal to those bestowed upon the military authorities in time of war. We say it may come. Every one must see the necessity of guarding against the epidemic, and of prompt relief to communities afflicted with it. The National Board of Health must be clothed with full power to do whatever is necessary to accomplish this, just as the fire department may tear down a man's private property whenever necessary to arrest the progress of the devouring flames.

We see Memphis to-day at the mercy of the destroying plague. If the disease continues to spread another week nearly every Southern town within three hundred miles will be quarantined against the poison-infected city. Man's inhumanity and man's frenzy in the presence of danger will convert whole communities into crazy mobs, and while cheap sympathy will be expressed, and perhaps liberal contributions for relief offered, the unfortunate men, women and children who remain there will be closed in to die. This at least appears to be the tendency of public sentiment. We trust that Christian men and women will not exchange the Golden Rule from their Bibles, nor take a vacation from the exercise of the cardinal principles of the religion they profess; but man is a frail being at best, and when he grows weak under excitement his conduct can not always be judged by his past professions.

The National Board of Health ought to be clothed with authority to select a healthy locality where barracks may be erected and full provisions made for such an emergency as has arisen at Memphis now for two years in succession. Humanity demands that more vigorous and thorough means should be adopted for protecting the people of certain districts against this oft-returning calamity. We repeat that we have the fullest confidence in the medical fraternity, but means should be afforded for keeping up their investigations to a satisfactory conclusion and of extending their measures of relief for the suffering.

NEW PUBLICATIONS.

The North American Review for August opens with an article of unusual interest from the pen of Richard Wagner. It is entitled "The Work and Mission of My Life." Only an appeal from America, he writes, could induce him to give a new explanation to his aims in art.

"The Diary of a Public Man," consists of extracts from the diary of one who was closely connected with political movements at the beginning of our Civil War. The writer was intimately acquainted with the principal actors in the negotiations which were entered into between the Secessionists and those who were using every endeavor to avoid war, and he gives many interesting passages from the secret history of that troubled time. The paper is a valuable addition to the history of the Rebellion. The third article is an eloquent tribute by Wendell Phillips to the memory of Garrison, and contains a brilliant summary of the life and character of the great abolitionist. The writer claims for Garrison a place in history as a man of profound statesmanship, since he was the first to organize a movement for the abolition of slavery with methods so wise and far-reaching that success crowned the work.

"The Power of Dissolution," by Edward Freeman, the historian, is a remarkably concise and lucid paper upon the power of the English throne to dissolve Parliament.

The next article is entitled "The Founder of the Khedivate." It was written about forty years ago by the late John L. Stephens, the distinguished American traveler. It gives an interesting account of the career of Mohammed Ali, the grandfather of the Khedive who has lately lost his throne, and the founder of modern Egypt. Mr. Stephens traveled in the East at a time when Mohammed was at the height of his power, and his description of this remarkable man will be read with much interest, now that attention is turned to Egypt by the recent crisis in the government there. The sixth paper treats of the "Future of Resumption." The anonymous writer finds in the present situation elements of danger which should be considered by all thoughtful men. These arise from the act of Congress of May 31, 1878, which prohibited the redemption of the notes as soon as they are redeemed, and from the act of February 28, in the same year, which occasions an accumulation of standard silver dollars in the Treasury. He finds cause for uneasiness also in what he regards as incongruous conceptions held by the Secretary of the Treasury in relation to a Government currency, and in the tendency of Congress to force the government to use silver in the payment of its indebtedness. The scheme of redemption is regarded as a festive, because the redeemed notes may be re-issued, and because silver has been made legal tender. The concluding article on "Recent Works on Ancient History and Philology" is an instructive review of five publications relating to the history, language and customs of early Aryans, by John Fiske.

THE STATE DEBT.

What Monroe County is Doing.

MADISONVILLE, July 21.

MR. EDITOR: Our county is beginning to manifest some interest in the State debt compromise.

On last Saturday a meeting of the citizens of Monroe county was held at the courthouse, at which two persons from each civil district were appointed as a committee to canvass and urge upon the people the importance of the acceptance of the 50-4 compromise proposition.

In order that the citizens of the county may be fully and clearly apprised of the importance of the issue, Prof. J. H. Bruner, President of Hiwassee College, and Capt. R. K. Robinson, of Madisonville, were selected to address the voters of the county, on the first Monday of August next, on the importance of the election, and urge the necessity of casting their votes in favor of the 50-4 compromise.

This, as we regard, is a move in the right direction; and all that is necessary is to let the people understand the importance of this matter, and if possible, induce them to feel enough interest to go to the polls and cast their vote accordingly.

There is no doubt but that this great trouble will be settled then, and not till then can we expect our State to prosper and take rank among the prosperous States of the Nation.

Ladies

Do you want a pure, blooming complexion? If so, a few applications of Hagan's MAGNOLIA BALM will gratify you to your heart's content. It does away with Saltiness, Redness, Pimples, Blotches, and all diseases and imperfections of the skin. It overcomes the flushed appearance of heat, fatigue and excitement. It makes a lady of THIRTY appear but TWENTY; and so natural, gradual, and perfect are its effects, that it is impossible to detect its application.

had occasion to converse on the subject, that the gentlemen whom we have named as selected to address the people on this question, was a wise choice, as they represent both political parties, and are also both entertaining and eloquent speakers, and are also well posted on the issues which are involved in the State questions, Dr. Bruner being a Democrat and King Robinson a Republican, in their political creeds. Therefore we feel it no more than just to say that you may expect old Monroe to roll up a fair majority at the August election for the 50 and 4 per cent. compromise.
